What is booksmart?

Booksmart is an easy way to buy books from students at your university. Primarily, purchases are for classes at UNC Charlotte. Buying and reselling books is one of the easiest ways to save money on textbooks.

How do you use it?

Simply search for a textbook that you need and see if a previous student is using their used copy. Once you find the book you need, you can contact the seller to inform them of your interest. Privately set up a place to meet to make the exchange. It is highly recommended that you meet in a public location to make the exchange, much like making purchases on Craigslist. Atkins or the Student Union at UNCC would make a great places to meet up.

Explanation of additional features

On /textbooks, a subject area link is created for any “new”/dynamic subjects that a user may designate.

Explanation of status

All of the required components are present and working. Uploading a photo, or even assigning two images currently does not work.

Discuss challenges

This project overall was fairly easy because most of the organization was already done in the last project. It felt like I may have deleted more code than wrote because mongoose makes it easy to implement the MongoDB database. At one point I attempted to edit the body of the requests on the front end to allow users to send more than one photo. I hope that I could then send the request using ajax, but I wasn’t able to make this work consistently. I believe that once I can get that to work, then that will be a helpful step forward to implementing photo cropping/uploading.
